OUR FRONTISPIECE

THEODORE WESLEY KOCH

By. F. L. D. Goodrich

When Theodore Wesley Koch was born in Philadelphia on August 4, 1871, a man of unusual personality was brought into the world. His education in the schools of Philadelphia, at the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard, and the Sorbonne, developed his latent abilities and fitted him for his long and distinguished career in the library profession. His first contribution to scholarship, and it was a truly great one, was the catalogue which he made of the Fiske Dante Collection at Cornell University. This established him as a bibliographer of the first rank.

Mr. Koch has not held many positions. He was twice a member of the staff of the Library of Congress. For eleven years he was librarian of the University of Michigan, where he liberalized the administration, beautified the austere reading rooms, made the books more accessible to undergraduate readers, and rounded out the book collection. Soon after leaving that library he was called to Northwestern University, where he has been librarian since 1919. In this position he has had the opportunity to demonstrate his executive ability and to display his artistic instincts, a combination which led to the erection of one of the most charming of the newer library buildings.

Many librarians have called upon Mr. Koch as consultant on problems of remodelling an old building or the planning of a new one. His recent contributions to library literature have been literary rather than bibliographic. They include monographs on the great libraries of the world and translations of a number of truly delightful stories having book collecting and bibliomania as their theme. He is a stimulating lecturer and a most entertaining raconteur. In short, he is a man of wide attainments and diversified interests who has devoted his life to the profession of librarianship.

SOUTHEY'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE ANNUAL REVIEW

By Kenneth Curry
University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Tenn.

Among the reviews of contemporary books on subjects as diversified as South Sea missions, biographies, and belles-lettres which Robert Southey contributed to several literary magazines, those for the Annual Review, edited by Arthur Aikin and published by Longman, must rank second in importance and bulk only to his better-known contributions to the celebrated Quarterly Review. The Annual Review appeared once a year from 1803 to 1809 and endeavored to present either reviews or abstracts of all the significant books which had been printed during the preceding year. Arthur Aikin (1773–1854), its editor, was the son of Dr. John Aikin (1747–1822), a well-known dissenter and dabbler in literature who edited ten volumes of General Biography; Anna Letitia Barbauld (1743–1825), a miscellaneous writer, friend of Mrs. Montagu and acquaintance of Dr. Johnson, was his aunt; and Lucy Aikin (1781–1864), an even lesser luminary, was his sister. Aikin, or King Arthur as Southey liked to call him, his aunt, and sister did most of the reviewing with the substantial assistance of Southey and William Taylor of Norwich.[1] The review succeeded well for a time,[2] but after its seventh appearance in 1809, the competition offered both by the successful Edinburgh Review and by the vigorous Tory Quarterly Review seems to have forced the retirement of the Annual from the field. The quality of the Annual's offering was quite uneven. Southey candidly, if not modestly, declared: "That said 'Annual Review' is of very unequal merit. In my conscience, if William Taylor and I were to forsake it, Mr. Longman might as well think of living without his liver and lungs, as of keeping his Review alive without us."[3] Aikin did not pay his authors well, and Southey always felt that he did not receive his due. His usual payment appears to have been about eighty pounds a year,[4] and considering the bulk of his contribution, his dissatisfaction is justifiable.

An accurate and complete list of Southey's contributions to the Annual Review was never compiled although Cuthbert Southey, his son and the author of The Life and Correspondence of Robert Southey, included in the appendix to the sixth volume of this work a list of his father's contributions to the first four volumes of the Annual Review. But this list, by consulting the correspondence of Southey and by investigating the clues to be found there, can easily be proved incomplete and occasionally inaccurate. In addition to this method of supplementing the information supplied by Cuthbert Southey, Southey himself kept rather faithfully a scrapbook of clippings of his contributions to the Annual, the scrapbook being now in the British Museum. The purchaser of this volume at the sale of Southey's library in 1844 inscribed the following note:

> This very curious & interesting volume was purchased at Southey's sale. It contains his reviews in the Annual Review taken out & pasted by himself — a more pleasing volume than it forms & one more to be prized by an admirer of Southey, cannot well be imagined. To a Biographer of Southey it would be invaluable.

A brief word is in order on the merit and significance of Southey's contributions to the Annual Review. Much of it, perhaps most of it, was hack work. The rate of pay was small, and the majority of the books which came to him for reviewing were disposed of with a perfunctory paragraph or perhaps even a sentence. The reviews of poetry were apt to be the most casually written, yet even here Southey had time to do a good turn for a young author in the case of Henry Kirke White, to point out a piece of plagiarism from Wordsworth at the same time reading the offender, Peter Bayley, a stiff lecture, and to berate Thomas Moore for the licentious tendency of his songs. Through them all he gives us a picture of his own literary principles and tastes. In bulk, Southey's reviews of travels loom large; this work he continued to do, notably in his distinguished articles for the Quarterly Review. His most comprehensive statement about his work for the Annual, in a letter to Nicholas Lightfoot, indicates that he considered his reviews which dealt with contemporary problems to be the most important, perhaps largely because he felt that in those he was doing his part to alleviate the ills of a diseased society.

> If you have seen or should see the Annual Review, you may like to know that I have borne a great part in it thus far, and I may refer you for the state of my opinions to the Reviewals of the Periodical Accounts of the Baptist Mission, vol. i., of Malthus's Essay on Population, Miles's History of the Methodists, and the Transactions of the Missionary Society, vol. ii. and iii., and of the Report of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, vol. iii. In other articles you may trace me from recollections of your own, by family likeness, by a knowledge of Spanish literature, and by a love of liberty and literature freely and warmly expressed.[5]

In the list of Southey's contributions to the Annual I have given merely the name of the author whose book was being reviewed together with an abbreviated title of the book. An asterisk (*) indicates that the work is mentioned in C. C. Southey's list,[6] a dagger (†) that the review has been preserved in Southey's scrapbook of clippings from the Annual Review, while footnotes are used to give the references to reviewals which are mentioned in his published correspondence. I have alphabetized the following list according to the author's name; in the case of an edition or a translation, the entry will be found under the original author rather than that of the editor or translator. Anonymous works and the publications and reports of societies are listed together at the end.

BURGOYNE'S INVASION, 1777

A Selected List of Published Sources Both Primary and Secondary

Compiled by EVERETT H. NORTHROP

PART II

Lamb, Roger. Memoir of his own life; by R. Lamb, formerly a serjeant in the Royal Welch fuzileers. Dublin, Printed by J. Jones, 1811. 296 pp.

Covers the Burgoyne surrender and expedition and contains a large amount of biographical information about unknown or forgotten officers of the Revolution. — The fine historical library of Dr. George C. F. Williams, Hartford, Conn. [relating to the American revolution]; sold by his order. N. Y. Anderson galleries, 1926. p. 89.

An original and authentic journal of occurrences during the late American war, from its commencement to the year 1783; by R. Lamb, late sergeant in the Royal Welch fuzileers. Dublin, Printed by Wilkinson and Courtney, 1809. 438 pp.

German

Du Roi, August Wilhelm. Journal of Du Roi the elder, lieutenant and adjutant in the service of the Duke of Brunswick, 1776–1778; tr. from the original German manuscript in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., by Charlotte S. J. Epping. Phil. Univ. of Pa. 1911. 189 pp. 2 facsim. tables. (Americana germanica, new ser., no. 15.)

Pausch, Georg. Journal of Captain Pausch, chief of the Hanau artillery during the Burgoyne campaign; tr. and annotated by William L. Stone; intrcd. by Edward J. Lowell. Albany, J. Munsell's sons, 1886. 185 pp. por., plate, 2 maps. (Munsell's historical ser., no. 14.)

Pettengill, Ray Waldron, tr. Letters from America, 1776–79; being letters of Brunswick, Hessian and Waldeck officers with the British armies during the Revolution. Bost. Houghton, 1924. pp. 68–141.

Reproduces practically all the original contributions on America and the Revolution contained in the ten volumes of Schlozer's Briefwechsel. Offered as a more complete and more accurate translation than William Leete Stone's Letters of Brunswick and Hessian officers during the American revolution (Albany, J. Munsell's sons, 1891) an examination of which by Pettengill "immediately revealed the fact that several letters were but briefly paraphrased, a few had been overlooked, while closer scrutiny showed several errors." — Preface.

Riedesel, Friederike Charlotte Luise (von Massow) freifrau von. Letters and journals relating to the war of the American revolution, and the capture of the German troops at Saratoga; tr. by William L. Stone. Albany, J. Munsell, 1867. 235 pp. por., plates. (Munsell's ser. of local American history, v. 6.)

Frankly anti-American in sympathies, but pervaded by an admirable temper, and a genuineness and directness of style which retain even the general reader's interest. — W. E. F. in Larned, p. 140. A partial translation by Jules Wallenstein (?) with an appendix containing "General Riedesel's official correspondence with General Washington and General Gates" appeared in 1827 (N. Y., G. & C. Carvill). Extracts from the correspondence were also printed in Wilkinson's Memoirs of my own times (q.v. above). — Adapted from Sabin, v. 17, p. 270.

Riedesel, Friedrich Adolph, freiherr von. Memoirs, and letters and journals, of Major General Riedesel, during his residence in America; tr. by William L. Stone. Albany, J. Munsell, 1868. 2 v. il. (Munsell's ser. of local American history, v. 8–9.)

This careful account . . . is the basis of our later and more accurate knowledge of the Burgoyne campaign, in which Riedesel commanded Burgoyne's Brunswick allies. . . . Not for the general reader. — W. E. F. in Larned, p. 140.

This is the most complete study yet made of the campaigns of 1777, and has very evidently involved original research of a type not likely to be done over again at any time in the very near future. In many respects, particularly as far as the American sources are concerned, it almost might be called the final word on the subject. — Randolph G. Adams in American historical review, v. 34, p. 353. USEFUL REFERENCE SERIES NO. 65

An Index To Monologs and Dialogs

By NORMA O. IRELAND and DAVID E. IRELAND

"Reference books should be prepared as this one was. The compilers have steadily kept the reference desk and its problems uppermost in their minds, and the result is a tool virtually without a flaw.

From the selection of the 89 collections for analysis to the last entry arrangement detail the hand of a good reference librarian is in evidence. Holdings circulation, and intrinsic value were the determining factors in selection and the arrangement is the most convenient of all — one alphabet for authors, titles, and subjects. Thoughtful was the addition of asterick for dialog, and appropriate symbols for male, female, not humorous (since most are) and poetry.

The foreword is a joy to read, both because of its compact and clear instructions and because of a personal style that lets you in on the making of the book. Mrs. Ireland has already established a reputation in the library profession both as a reference librarian and as an author of basic reference tools. The present collaborated effort verifies librarians' high regard for her work and establishes Mr. Ireland as a man of discriminating literary tastes. Indispensable in all libraries." Wilson Library Bulletin, Dec. 1939.

SMALL DIRECTORY OF ADDRESSES

By MAHALA SAVILLE

This book is designed primarily for reference workers, librarians in small libraries, school teachers and others who need frequent access to certain types of addresses which are not conveniently available.

The selection was made from lists and advertisements appearing in material in a small university library. The intention was to cover the fields most frequently requested and to include in so far as possible a number of the principal addresses for each subject.

77 pp., Cloth $1.25
